Dear Hiring Team,

Re: Social Media Marketing Assistant (Remote, Part-time)

I'm applying for the Social Media Marketing Assistant role. The work you describe, turning briefs and launches into clear copy for email, social and the website, then reading the reports to see what worked, is the work I already do for e-commerce and education brands.

For SkinMasterclass, an education brand, I run social media content across LinkedIn, Facebook and Instagram, manage campaigns and look after the brand's client relationships. For Garden Nursery Products, an Australian e-commerce retailer, I write and publish blog articles and email newsletters, update content in WordPress and WooCommerce, and review GA4 reports. You can see samples at archellringconada.com under Writing Samples.

A few things that match what you're looking for:

- Analytical habits. When I reviewed Garden Nursery Products' analytics, I found that about 51% of sessions were overseas bots. I rebuilt the reporting around real customers, which corrected engagement from 99.9% to 55.7%. I like finding what is behind a number.
- Paid and organic social. I managed $36K+ in LinkedIn Ads spend across full-funnel campaigns: 524K+ impressions, 9.4K clicks at a $1.99 CPC, and 56 leads.
- Tools. I work in Google Workspace and Asana, and I'm comfortable in Slack, Instagram, Facebook/Meta, TikTok, WordPress, WooCommerce, GA4 and Semrush.
- AI. I use Claude Code and AI-assisted workflows, and I built an Airtable to Make to WooCommerce stock sync that has run without failure since launch.

To be upfront about gaps: I have not yet used HubSpot, though I have worked with ActiveCampaign and GoHighLevel for CRM, email and workflow automation, and I expect the skills to carry over quickly. I don't yet have a health and wellness marketing background, and I'm glad to follow your guidance on compliant, non-diagnostic language and keep every claim accurate and defensible.

I work well from direction and feedback, keep to deadlines, and already work remotely with international clients. I would welcome the chance to talk about how I can support your Marketing Manager.

Thank you for your time,
Archie Ringconada
